

WHAT IS CoR.A?

CoR.A is a qualitative research project carried out by the Refugee Centre Hamburg in the thematic field of return and reintegration. It is co-financed by the Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund (AMIF) and the Hamburg Social Authority.

DURATION

The project runs for 21 months (January 2021 to September 2022).

THE CoR.A TEAM

The project team has broad and interdisciplinary social science expertise. It also has practical experience in the counselling context and thus combines science and counselling practice.

OUR GOALS

We would like to.....

- primarily understand what moves returnees and their social environment in the context of return and reintegration, what is going on with the people involved in return and reintegration processes and how they deal with it.

- provide a professionally sound basis for further discussion of the multi-layered and complex topics of return and reintegration.
- contribute to the further development of counselling practice and the needs orientation of future support services.

THE SURVEY - QUALITATIVE CASE STUDIES

The central element of the project is a time- and resource-intensive qualitative survey that aims to observe and analyse reintegration processes. Returnees (and their social environment) are accompanied in their reintegration process over a longer period of time.

The project thus addresses the need for qualitative analyses that was identified by the predecessor project CoRe (Competent Return), among others, and which allows the returnees themselves to have their say.

Through visits to countries of origin, returnees and their social environment can be interviewed in depth on site. In this way, first-hand impressions are collected and the the perspectives of those affected are in focus.

Through the open approach and the focus on the living environment of returnees, challenges and needs can be highlighted. In perspective, the survey can thus make an important contribution to ensuring that future services can be designed in a needs-oriented manner.

NETWORKING

In the context of two events, the project also offers actors in the fields of return and reintegration exchange spaces that can be used for networking, knowledge dissemination, joint reflection and discussion on relevant topics.
